spared the torch. It was rumored that Sherman bypassed the building because it housed a Masonic Lodge and that the Union Leader was himself a Mason. More likely its use as a hospital was the reason the building was not burned.

Although less than 8,000 people lived in Jackson at the turn of the century, its population began accelerating rapidly after 1900, and it is now one of the dynamic growth cities of the Sunbelt. In 2006, the population had climbed to more than 175,000 and the metropolitan area rose to better than 500,000. It is a major distribution center with a prime location of equal distance between Memphis and New Orleans (north-south), and between Dallas and Atlanta (east-west). Government – representing city, county, state, and federal agencies – is the city's largest employer.

As a major distribution center, efficient transportation facilities are a must. Major air carriers are located in the Jackson-Evers International Airport. The Canadian National/Illinois Central Railroad and the Kansas City Southern Railroad and scores of major truck lines provide freight service to all parts of the nation. Jackson boasts a regional shopping mall and several smaller, multi-store centers. Six hospitals, including the nationally renowned University of Mississippi Medical Center, provide diagnosis and treatment for nearly every possible physical and emotional ailment.

Every major religious faith is represented in the city, and there are more than 400 houses of worship scattered throughout the 105 square miles of community. An excellent public school system is an integral part of the city proper, as well as several private and parochial schools. Five colleges and three universities are located within 15 miles of the city's center.

Thousands of acres of public parks, formal and informal gardens, a nationally famous zoo, neighborhood playgrounds, and baseball, football, tennis, and soccer fields provide recreational outlets for all Jackson citizens. Outdoor living is paramount and all types of activities are available. Jogging and bike routes, nature trails, tennis centers, public and private golf courses, swimming pools and health clubs abound. The 50-square-mile Ross Barnett Reservoir, 12 miles northeast of the city center, is a haven for skiers, fishermen, campers, swimmers, and boating enthusiasts.

Residents are extremely proud of their famed Southern hospitality and outstanding quality of life. Community support is strong for a symphony orchestra, ballet company, an opera company, numerous theater groups, and world-class performances presented by local arts organizations.

Every four years, Jackson hosts the official USA International Ballet Competition at beautiful Thalia Mara Hall. The Mississippi Arts District also includes the International Museum of Muslim Cultures, the Russell C. Davis Planetarium, and the Mississippi Museum of Art.

Gourmet dining and nightlife sparkle on the Jackson scene. Many cultures and ethnic groups provide the city with cuisine that is truly international. One can choose from many different styles including Greek, Caribbean, Continental, Italian, Chinese, Japanese, Mexican, or good old Southern style.

With a rich history, convenient transportation, thriving cultural community and international cuisine, Jackson provides entertainment and Southern hospitality only found in the City with Soul.
